

I do not want the FCC to implement anything that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. I used to receive on average several phone calls a day. It would get so bad sometimes I wouldn't even answer the phone and let it go to voice mail. Now I don't get them. I understand your proposal would mean companies I have previously done business with, but not currently, could consider me an "existing customer." Let's take for example phone companies. If I want to change my long-distance service, I am perfectly capable of going out to their websites and getting the latest information on long-distance companies. I don't need them calling me. I like things the way they are, please don't change it.
